

BUNKER HILL VILLAGE

AREA HISTORY

Bunker Hill Village is a wooded residential area, independent from the surrounding metropolis – a place where families have room to roam but remain close to city life. Once a country community that was considered far from Houston, the land was incorporated in the 1950s. The area's minimum lot size is 20,000 feet in most areas, and stringent zoning ordinances have helped to maintain the area's prominence. Bunker Hill is part of the Spring Branch school system. Many of the area's original flat-roof contemporary homes are still standing among the newer extravagant mansions that now define Bunker Hill Village. The area's large lots, tranquil setting, strict zoning ordinances, and country origins attract newcomers, as well as long-time Houston residents, in search of space and peaceful surroundings.

2
 1
 e
 e u
 u w o
 o
 p
 k
 i
 u
 u
 .
 c
 o
 e

This is a detailed street map of the Taylorcrest neighborhood in Memphis, Tennessee. The map is oriented with North at the top, indicated by a north arrow and the letter 'N'. A red arrow points to 'KeyMap 490'. The map shows a grid of streets with names like Edgewood, Cobblestone, Homewood, and Taylorcrest. It also includes labels for surrounding areas like Gessner, Memorial, and Blalock. The map is a black and white line drawing with street names in a serif font. The streets are arranged in a grid pattern, with some streets running horizontally and others vertically. The map shows the layout of the neighborhood, including the locations of streets, the names of the streets, and the names of the surrounding areas. The map is a detailed representation of the neighborhood's street layout.